Rackemann, Sawyer & Brewster is home to one of Boston's oldest and most well-respected trusts and estates practice groups. Our group represents individuals and families in protecting and preserving their wealth through multiple generations with practical and sophisticated estate planning techniques. We represent individuals and corporations in trust and estate administration as well as probate litigation. In addition, individual members of the group serve as professional trustees, filling a vital role for their clients, and providing skilled and experienced counsel. Our team has a wide range and depth of experience, which facilitates the development of long-term relationships with our clients, often spanning several successive generations.

Clients throughout New England and beyond view us as trusted family counselors and rely on us for legal, financial, tax and practical advice about a wide variety of concerns and issues. Our trust and estate lawyers recognize that each of our clients has unique objectives, background, perspective and thoughts about long-term planning. We are eager to work with each client utilize creative and effective methods of realizing those goals.
